EARTHQUAKES SHAKE PELOPONNESUS TODAY

CRUMBLE TOWNS ALL ALONG THE CORINTHIAN GULF

SEVERAL DEATHS REPORTED, CASUALTY LIST MAY NOT EXCEED 20

WOMEN AND CHILDREN INJURED BENEATH THE FALLING WALLS

Athens, April 18—(U.P.)—Earthquakes continued to shake Peloponnesus today, increasing property damage in crumbling towns along the Corinthian Gulf.

Several deaths were reported, but the casualty list, including the seriously injured, is believed not to exceed 20.

A number of women and children are said to have been injured beneath falling falls, on the island of Ageina, 16 miles southwest of Athens. The quakes began at 10:10 P. M. last night.

Athens, which was approximately 30 miles from the epicenter of the disturbance, felt severe shocks throughout the night.

Dramatic scenes, heightened by the tradition of the earth's trembling at the Crucifixion, occurred in many churches throughout the shaken district, where throngs were attending pre-Easter services.

The roof of one church was split open. Sacred images tottered and fell, and candles and tapers were thrown from their candlesticks. The congregations rushed out of doors, and many women fainted in the dash to escape. A number of them were injured. Church services were ended in many instances.

The populace of Corinth, fearing a recurrence of recent nightly destructive earthquakes, were panic stricken, and after the first shocks widely exaggerated reports of the extent of the damage were circulated.

The intensity of the tremor caused rumors that many towns in the Peloponnesus were destroyed, but investigation proved them untrue.

FIRE THREATENED MARENGO, WIS.

RAIN AND EASING OF WIND AID FIRE FIGHTERS TO SAVE TOWN

Marengo, Wis., April 18.—(U.P.) — A forest fire which for a time threatened to wipe out Marengo was under control today as fire fighters, cheered on by a slight drizzle and the cessation of a strong wind, redoubled their efforts.

Citizens of Marengo were prepared to flee from their homes yesterday when the drizzle set in to check the advance of the flames. A group of 30 men had battled the fire for two days but the dry timber burned faster than they could work.

Fire fighters predicted that the danger was past although they said the resumption of the strong gale of yesterday would fan the flames out of control again.

Other fires in the wooded district of northern Wisconsin and Minnesota were reported checked after burning over more than 5,000 acres of timber and brush land.

The identification was made by his wife. Arton had come to Minneapolis two days ago looking for work. A verdict of suicide was given by Coroner Gilbert A. Seashore.

Arton was found by police with a bottle of carbolic acid by his side. He was rushed to the General Hospital but died two hours later.

CHICAGO BANDITS TAKE TO THE AIR, HOLD UP AIR MAIL

TRICKY WEATHER OF NORTHWEST DEPRIVES THEM OF MOST OF FRUITS OF HAUL

SEIZE 5 POUCHES, 2 OF THEM WERE FULL OF REGISTERED MAIL MATTER

Chicago, April 18. — (U.P.) — Tricky weather in the northwest which grounded airplanes, deprived Chicago's first air mail bandits of most of the fruits of a spectacular robbery.

Three gunmen, working recklessly for what they thought was a rich haul, held up the air mail at the municipal airport almost in the heart of the city shortly before midnight, seized five pouches, two of them full of registered mail, and fled. Except that large consignments of northwest air mail failed to reach Milwaukee from Minneapolis and St. Paul in time to catch the Chicago bound airplane the plunder probably would have been twice as much, postal officials said today.

The inspectors were checking up to determine the exact amount of loot the gunmen obtained. They said it probably would not reach a high figure.

The Milwaukee air mail plane hummed into the airport last night and the ground lights blazed to show the pilot, A. R. Mensing of Oshkosh, Wis., the landing runways.

Mensing brought the plane to a standstill, leaped out dragging five sacks of mail and turned them over to Adolph Stenho, truck driver who works only one night a week. The chauffeur started to the field post office but was halted by a sedan parked across the bumpy airport road.

Three gunmen escorted him south from the field and farther on placed him and the mail in the sedan. Still farther on Stenho was thrown out and the robbers speeded away, cheated of more than half of their anticipated loot.

David Lyons, postal inspector, said he was convinced that the bandits expected a valuable consignment of mail from the northwest because of the well planned robbery and evident recklessness.

Senate Investigating American Governmental and Political Machinery Most Intensively

FOUR SWEEPING INVESTIGATIONS ARE UNDER WAY

PROBING LOBBIES, USE OF CAMPAIGN FUNDS, PRACTICES U. S. SHIPPING BOARD

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT'S LEASING POLICY BEING THOROUGHLY AIRED

Washington, April 18.—(U.P.) — The senate is turning to investigations of American governmental and political machinery with an intensity perhaps never before equalled save in the drama-charged years which revealed the faudulent leasing of Teapot Dome and the Veterans' Bureau scandals.

Four sweeping investigations either are under way or in process of being authorized. They are designed to bring to light all available facts regarding efforts to influence legislation through lobbies, use of campaign funds, practices of the U. S. shipping board, and the post office department's gation, has astounded a blase capital leasing policy.

The first of these, the lobby investi- with its revelations of the number of agents employed and the thousands of dollars spent to influence legislation here. Chairman Caraway has brought to light the machinery of the tariff lobby and the Muscle Shoals lobby and now is concentrating on prohibition.

The verbal skirmish between dry members of the senate lobby committee and Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, continued today as Curran appeared before the committee for the third time.

Curran's testimony has been marked by frequent clashes with committeemen. These clashes have overshadowed in interest the evidence presented. Most of the sharp exchanges have occurred between Curran and Chairman Caraway, dry, Arkansas democrat, generally considered the senate's most proficient exponent of sharp repartee.

There have been many political by-products of these investigations. Disclosures concerning the connection of Republican National Committee Chairman Huston with the Muscle Shoals lobby is expected by many observers here to result sooner or later in his resignation.

Efforts are being made by republicans to show up the connection of the democratic national chairman, John J. Raskob, with the prohibition lobby. Already evidence that he was used by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment as a lever for democratic financial support has been obtained.

An investigation of post office leases, precipitated by discovery of alleged exorbitant rates being paid for a building at St. Paul, is expected to be in progress soon. The senate audit and control committee is scheduled to report today on the Blaine resolution authorizing this quiz. Little doubt is held that the senate will approve it.

This resolution probably will be followed on the senate floor by that of Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, providing for an investigation of the U. S. shipping board. This body, charged with the gigantic task of turning America's war-time merchant marine into a peace-time, privately-operated fleet, has often been under fire in the senate. It has been charged with sacrificing American ships to favored bidders.

Headed by Senator Nye of North Dakota, one of the independent republicans, the senate campaign funds investigating committee is to launch a broad inquiry within a day or two. Illinois and Pennsylvania primaries will be investigated first.

Prospective changes in the immigration law were discussed in the senate today while the house considered legislation to provide benefits for world war veterans denied compensation under existing laws.

The bill before the senate is that of Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, to extend the immigration quotas to countries of the western hemisphere.

This bill is complicated, however, by three amendments. One offered by Senator Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, would repeal the national origins clause of the present immigration act. Another amendment offered by Senator Allen, republican, Kansas, is designed to admit immigrants on the basis of their adaptiveness to American employment needs. Still another presented by Senator Black, Alabama, would stop all immigration for five years.

Commissioner Eastman of the interstate commerce commission was to appear before the senate interstate commerce committee today. He was expected to supply facts bearing on the Couzens resolution to deprive the commission temporarily of its merger-approving powers.

Only one important house committee was scheduled to meet today. That was the judiciary committee which, in executive session, was to consider bills recommended by the president's law enforcement commission to relieve congestion in the courts.

A week-end vacation, to enable representatives living nearby to visit their homes over the Easter holidays, was being planned today by house leaders.

BUDD MAY REVIVE RAILROADS OF THE SOVIET

REPORT THAT PRESIDENT OF GREAT NORTHERN HAS ACCEPTED TASK

TO DIRECT REHABILITATION OF SOVIET RUSSIA THIS SUMMER

St. Paul, Minn., April 18.—(U.P.)—The St. Paul Daily News today said Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern railroad, has decided to accept the invitation of the Soviet Union of Russia to direct the rehabilitation of its railroads this summer.

E. J. Stanley, railroad writer of the Daily News, said he had learned of Budd's acceptances in advices from New York. He said the report could not be confirmed in St. Paul.

Other officials of the Great Northern said they had no information concerning Budd's plans for this summer. They indicated the Great Northern president intended to go to Russia if railroad affairs were such that he could leave the United States.

Persons in authority in the Great Northern offices said if Budd decides to go to Russia his acceptance may be regarded as indicative that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific have given up the proposal to divest themselves of the Burlington in the merger plan proposed by the interstate commerce commission.

They said such a decision by Budd would indicate the Great Northern and Northern Pacific stockholders have found it impossible to arrive at a satisfactory arrangements by which they could accept the consolidation plan.

Budd was asked to visit Russia this year and make a survey of Soviet railroad facilities by J. Rudzutak, Soviet commissar of transportation. Rudzutak asked Budd to act in an advisory capacity in the work of rebuilding the lines.

During the world war, John F. Stevens, internationally known engineer and friend of Budd, was in charge of all Russian railroad transportation.

ALLEGED BURGLAR PICTURES SELF AS A ROBIN HOOD

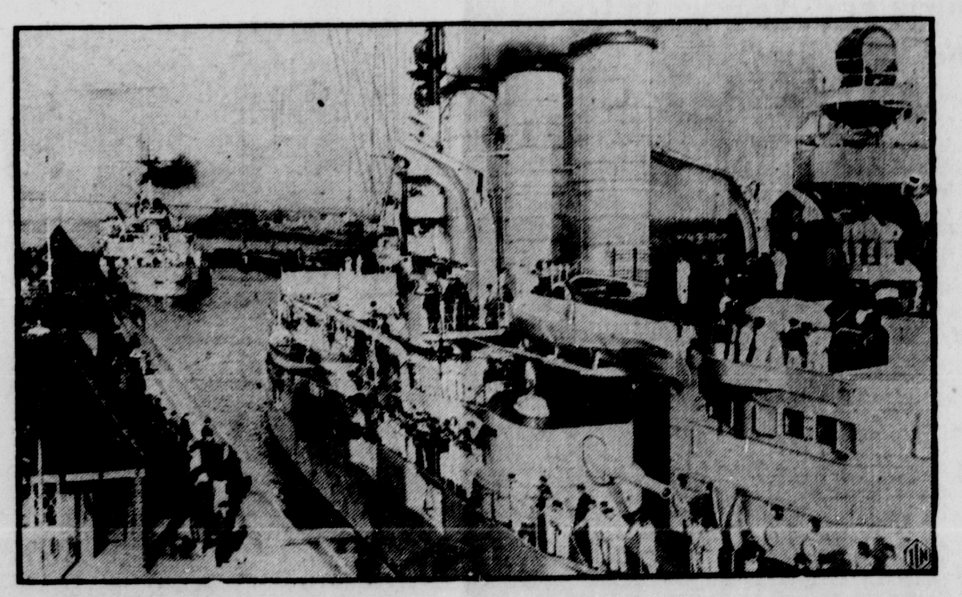

Newton, Mass., April 18.—(U.P.)—The sombre records of the Newton police department were enlivened today by the story of an alleged burglar who pictured himself as a modern Robin Hood.

Fred G. Hughes, 47, who gave his address as Hotel Sherman, Chicago, and who was arrested Wednesday night in connection with the theft of $100,000 in jewelry, told police his activities as a burglar had extended into everyone of the 48 states.

He claimed, however, that some of the money realized from the sale of stolen goods had been distributed to poor children and "down-and-outers."

Pending court action, Hughes is being held under $80,000 bail.

Too Efficient for France and Italy

Germany's biggest battleship, the "Hessen," with the new cruiser, the "Schleswig-Holstein," following in the distance as they make their way through the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal on their way to the tropics for maneuvers. Although these ships were constructed in adherence to the disarmament pact they are nevertheless the most efficient of war vessels, and it was Italy's and France's fear of them that caused many disagreements in the five-power parley in London, according to authorities.

ANGRY NATIVE MOB MILLS AROUND JAIL

INFLAMED BY YESTERDAY'S BITTER RIOTING AND BLOODSHED IN INDIA

SIX LEADERS OF GANDHI INDEPENDENCE MOVE SENTENCED TO PRISON TERMS

By G. M. DYCEKEELE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Karachi, India, April 18—(U.P.)—Wild scenes and rioting occurred outside the Karachi jail today when six leaders of the Gandhi independence movement were sentenced to from six months to two years in prison for sedition.

Police quelled the mob.

Trial was held in the jail as a result of a determined attack on the court house by 10,000 Indians, in which one native was killed and 57 others, including 17 policemen, were injured.

A mass funeral for Dattaram Konde, the rioter who was killed, was held at sunset last night, with thousands of sympathizers in attendance. His body was placed on a funeral pyre and cremated.

Death of a second victim of yesterday's rioting occurred at noon today, and was the signal for a new demonstration, but one that failed to provoke a clash with the armed forces.

The second dead rioter was Maharaj Requachand, an 18-year-old youth, who failed to survive bullet wounds inflicted during a police charge.

Bombay, India, April 18.—A raid by Indian congress volunteers upon the government salt pans at Wadal, eight miles from Bombay, passed without serious incident yesterday, although the volunteers broke the law by distributing salt to the local population.

MORE PUBLIC HEARINGS NEEDED

BEFORE ANY UNIFICATION OF G. N. AND N. P. ROADS IS ACCOMPLISHED

St. Paul, Minn., April 18.—(U.P.)—Additional public hearings will be necessary before any unification of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads is accomplished, Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, said today on his return from Washington. Committees of the Northern roads are now at work on a plan by which the Northerns would acquire the Burlington property between St. Paul and Aurora, Ill., and obtain running rights from Aurora to Chicago.

This would provide a Chicago outlet which is impossible under the interstate commerce commission's plan of divorcing the Burlington road from the Northerns, Donnelly said.

Donnelly, who returned from Washington, D. C., today, said that while there he and Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, discussed the merger with northwest representatives but did not confer with members of the interstate commerce commission.

COUNTRY'S POLICY ON EIGHT INCH GUNS ON CRUISERS SET ASIDE

Washington, April 18.—(U.P.) — This country's policy in regard to eight-inch guns on cruisers has been set aside by the London naval treaty, Chairman Hale of the senate naval affairs commitee today in a speech asking senators to withhold judgment on hte disarmament pact.

Hale recommended the treaty be submitted to his committee for hearings before it is accepted by the senate.

St. Paul, April 18.—(U.P.)—"Fair and warmer" for Easter fashion parades in the northwest was promised today by the United States weather bureau. M. R. Hovde, federal forecaster for Minnesota, declined to make an official prediction but said the weather probably will be favorable.

ATTACKS FEDERAL FARM BOARD, MARKETING ACT

MAKES ITS CAMPAIGN ONE OF NATION-WIDE SIGNIFICANCE

CORRESPONDS WITH GRAIN, PRODUCE, COMMODITY EXCHANGES THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Minneapolis, Minn., April 18.—(U.P.)—The Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce today launched a nation-wide battle against the federal farm board and the agricultural marketing act.

Grain, produce and commodity exchanges throughout the country were being asked to endorse a resolution which will be submitted at the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce this month.

The resolution asks the repeal of the marketing act and condemns the policies and program of the farm board.

The effort is being made in order to obtain a "clear expression of the position of American business, officials of the Grain Exchange said.

In a letter to grain exchanges urging support of the resolution, C. T. Stevenson, vice-president and councilor of the Minneapolis chamber, said that no line of business was safe if the grain and produce dealers of the country could be destroyed by federal statute.

The resolution would put the national chamber on record as condemning the agricultural marketing act "as being a measure whcih clearly puts the federal government into business in competition with citizens of this country and as a measure which is directly contrary to the principles of the United States Chamber of Commerce."

Stevenson said that "if a timid and evasive position is taken by representatives of the nation's business gathered at Washington with reference to the agricultural marketing act and the policies of the federal farm board then the answer to the questino of 'What's Ahead for Business?' will be 'It's ultimate and complete destruction'."

RECORD EASTER BUSINESS ANTICIPATED

(By United Press)

Expectations of a record Easter retail business was expressed by leading retailers throughout the country today.

Notwithstanding spotty business conditions as an aftermath of last autumn's break in the stock market, merchants report their stores crowded with buyers. Demand is largely for the cheaper merchandise, however, indicating a reduction in purchasing power of the general public.

Weather conditions have been favorable for active Easter sales, although cloudy conditions prevailed in the eastern states. The fact that Easter this year is later than last is cited as a reason for the comparative poor March results of leading retailers.

During the world war, John F. Stevens, internationally known engineer and friend of Budd, was in charge of all Russian railroad transportation.

ALLEGED BURGLAR PICTURES SELF AS A ROBIN HOOD

Newton, Mass., April 18.—(U.P.)—The sombre records of the Newton police department were enlivened today by the story of an alleged burglar who pictured himself as a modern Robin Hood.

Fred G. Hughes, 47, who gave his address as Hotel Sherman, Chicago, and who was arrested Wednesday night in connection with the theft of $100,000 in jewelry, told police his activities as a burglar had extended into everyone of the 48 states.

He claimed, however, that some of the money realized from the sale of stolen goods had been distributed to poor children and "down-and-outers."

Pending court action, Hughes is being held under $80,000 bail.

ANGRY NATIVE MOB MILLS AROUND JAIL

INFLAMED BY YESTERDAY'S BITTER RIOTING AND BLOODSHED IN INDIA

SIX LEADERS OF GANDHI INDEPENDENCE MOVE SENTENCED TO PRISON TERMS

By G. M. DYCEKEELE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Karachi, India, April 18—(U.P.)—Wild scehes and rioting occurred outside the Karachi jail today when six leaders of the Gandhi independence movement were sentenced to from six months to two years in prison for sedition.

Police quelled the mob.

Trial was held in the jail as a result of a determined attack on the court house by 10,000 Indians, in which one native was killed and 57 others, including 17 policemen, were injured.

A mass funeral for Dattaram Konde, the rioter who was killed, was held at sunset last night, with thousands of sympathizers in attendance. His body was placed on a funeral pyre and cremated.

Death of a second victim of yesterday's rioting occurred at noon today, and was the signal for a new demonstration, but one that failed to provoke a clash with the armed forces.

The second dead rioter was Maharaj Requachand, an 18-year-old youth, who failed to survive bullet wounds inflicted during a police charge.

Bombay, India, April 18.—A raid by Indian congress volunteers upon the government salt pans at Wadal, eight miles from Bombay, passed without serious incident yesterday, although the volunteers broke the law by distributing salt to the local population.

MORE PUBLIC HEARINGS NEEDED

BEFORE ANY UNIFICATION OF G. N. AND N. P. ROADS IS ACCOMPLISHED

St. Paul, Minn., April 18.—(U.P.)—Additional public hearings will be necessary before any unification of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads is accomplished, Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, said today on his return from Washington. Committees of the Northern roads are now at work on a plan by which the Northerns would acquire the Burlington property between St. Paul and Aurora, Ill., and obtain running rights from Aurora to Chicago.

This would provide a Chicago outlet which is impossible under the interstate commerce commission's plan of divorcing the Burlington road from the Northerns, Donnelly said.

Donnelly, who returned from Washington, D. C., today, said that while there he and Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, discussed the merger with northwest representatives but did not confer with members of the interstate commerce commission.

COUNTRY'S POLICY ON EIGHT INCH GUNS ON CRUISERS SET ASIDE

Washington, April 18.—(U.P.) — This country's policy in regard to eight-inch guns on cruisers has been set aside by the London naval treaty, Chairman Hale of the senate naval affairs commitee today in a speech asking senators to withhold judgment on hte disarmament pact.

Hale recommended the treaty be submitted to his committee for hearings before it is accepted by the senate.

FAIR AND WARMER WEATHER FOR EASTER

St. Paul, April 18.—(U.P.)—"Fair and warmer" for Easter fashion parades in the northwest was promised today by the United States weather bureau. M. R. Hovde, federal forecaster for Minnesota, declined to make an official prediction but said the weather probably will be favorable.

ATTACKS FEDERAL FARM BOARD, MARKETING ACT

MAKES ITS CAMPAIGN ONE OF NATION-WIDE SIGNIFICANCE

CORRESPONDS WITH GRAIN, PRODUCE, COMMODITY EXCHANGES THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Minneapolis, Minn., April 18.—(U.P.)—The Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce today launched a nation-wide battle against the federal farm board and the agricultural marketing act.

Grain, produce and commodity exchanges throughout the country were being asked to endorse a resolution which will be submitted at the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce this month.

The resolution asks the repeal of the marketing act and condemns the policies and program of the farm board.

The effort is being made in order to obtain a "clear expression of the position of American business, officials of the Grain Exchange said.

In a letter to grain exchanges urging support of the resolution, C. T. Stevenson, vice-president and councillor of the Minneapolis chamber, said that no line of business was safe if the grain and produce dealers of the country could be destroyed by federal statute.

The resolution would put the national chamber on record as condemning the agricultural marketing act "as being a measure whcih clearly puts the federal government into business in competition with citizens of this country and as a measure which is directly contrary to the principles of the United States Chamber of Commerce."

Stevenson said that "If a timid and evasive position is taken by representatives of the nation's business gathered at Washington with reference to the agricultural marketing act and the policies of the federal farm board then the answer to the questino of 'What's Ahead for Business?' will be 'It's ultimate and complete destruction'."

RECORD EASTER BUSINESS ANTICIPATED

(By United Press)

Expectations of a record Easter retail business was expressed by leading retailers throughout the country today.

Notwithstanding spotty business conditions as an aftermath of last autumn's break in the stock market, merchants report their stores crowded with buyers. Demand is largely for the cheaper merchandise, however, indicating a reduction in purchasing power of the general public.

Weather conditions have been favorable for active Easter sales, although cloudy conditions prevailed in the eastern states. The fact that Easter this year is later than last is cited as a reason for the comparative poor March results of leading retailers.

Found Guilty of Slaying Husband of Boyhood Sweetheart

Batesville, Ark., April 18. — (U.P.) — John P. Barber, former high school football star, was found guilty today on a charge of murdering Maurice Osborne, husband of Barber's boyhood sweetheart.

The jury had been out since 5:30 P. M. yesterday, when it returned its verdict at 11 A. M. Osborne was shot to death when he returned home the night of July 1, 1929, and found his young wife with Barber.

MORE AUTOMOBILES SOLD IN WISCONSIN

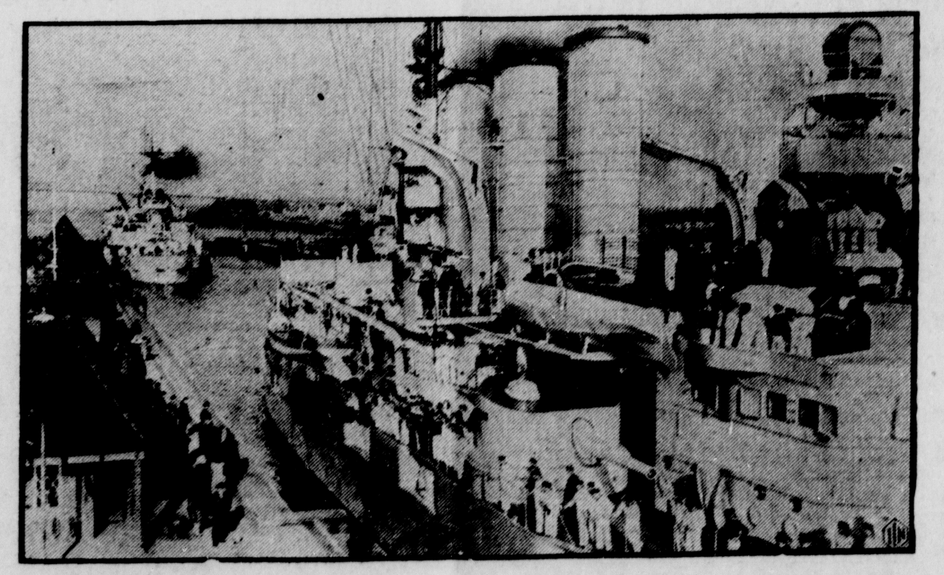

Madison, Wis., April 18.—(U.P.)—More automobiles were sold in Wisconsin last month than any March in history of the business, according to dealers' reports to the secretary of state. But all other lines of trade do not show corresponding conditions. Spring apparel business is reported as spotty, with weather and other conditions blamed.

4 Youths Charged With Filling Station Robbery

Grand Island, Neb., April 18.—(U.P.)—Four Chicago Heights youths, the oldest of whom was 17, were held today for Mineral Point, Wis., officials in connection with the robbery of a gasoline filling station at the Wisconsin city.

The boys gave their names as Dominic Tintari, 17; Stephen Yacono, 16; Lew Drew, 15, and Sam April, 16. They were traveling in an automobile belonging to Tintari's father, who is a Chicago Heights contractor.

Too Efficient for France and Italy

Germany's biggest battleship, the "Hessen," with the new cruiser, the "Schleswig-Holstein," following in the distance as they make their way through the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal on their way to the tropics for maneuvers. Although these ships were constructed in adherence to the disarmament pact they are nevertheless the most efficient of war vessels, and it was Italy's and France's fear of them that caused many disagreements in the five-power parley in London, according to authorities.

Five favorites of the New York musical comedy stage, Helen Morgan, Charles Ruggles and those three hilarious comedians, Clayton, Jackson and Durante, each one a star in his or her own right, play the leading roles in "Roadhouse Nights," Paramount's all talking and singing romantic melodrama, based on an original story by Ben Hecht.

Here is a picture packed with entertainment of every description. From adventure and romance to amusing interpolations of rollicking comedy, song and dance, this latest Paramount production sweeps along at a lively, diverting gay pace, in which the leading players are seen and heard at their very best.

"Roadhouse Nights," which was directed by Hobart Henley, will be presented at the Paramount theatre Saturday only.

"SHEIK'S WIFE"
BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

EVELYN READE, young and lovely, is making her first journey alone to visit a friend at Haverford. On the train she meets Kenneth Wilmer, famous artist, who saves her from falling from the platform. Attracted by her old-fashioned sweetness, he feels strangely drawn to her and suddenly kisses her. He persuades her to stop in and see the Hollys, friends of his, intead of going on to her destination. She falls asleep on a couch in the living room. Waking in the morning she is panic stricken and stealthily leaves the house. She finally arrives at her friend's home. Mary Stewart thinks Eve came in on the early morning train.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER IV.

THEY had not met since Mary's wedding and the kitchen buzzed with excited questions, half answers, questions again. Eve had been Mary's maid of honor and she met Jimmy Stewart only at the wedding. Now he came in shyly, a likeable gray-eyed boy who kissed her while Mary pretended to be wild with jealousy, and said he hoped she would remain with them all Summer.

"It must be lonesome up in Connecticut. Stay here and show Mary how to manage a high-stepping husband." He grinned at his wife who told him not to worry about Eve.

"She'll have a husband of her own one of these days. How's Roger, darling?"

They were seated in the little breakfast nook which was very bridey with table and chairs painted a bright canary color and gaily flowered china. Mary was pouring coffee, making a great ceremony of it, and she looked up just in time to see her friend's face go scarlet.

It was not the blush of a girl being teased about an old beau and Mary, who was romantic, sensed mystery. Adventure, secrecy, sudden, sweeping emotions —all the things she had missed in her own rather commonplace courtship and marriage she imagined behind the color that went flaming in Eve's face.

And she began to chatter about other things, telling herself the mystery would wait. They would have a long talk the moment Jimmy left for the city. Eve would confide everything just as she always had done all their lives.

But Saturday passed without a word that Mary ached to hear and a long April Sunday moved slowly round the clock. And it was not until Sunday night that Mary began to suspect the cause of her guest's restlessness, her frequent spells of silence, the sudden starts she gave as if brought suddenly from deep sleep.

For on Sunday night Kenneth Wilmer came.

It was a lazy day, that long April Sunday with gentle, fly-away breezes puffing out of nowhere; with white ships of clouds sailing the deep blue overhead and a fortune in the golden coin of dandelions sprinkling itself over the green velvet of the old farmhouse lawn.

Eve helped Mary with breakfast, with the dishes afterward, with "picking up" still later, glancing at the sturdy, rather square little figure of her friend, feeling the kindness of blue eyes, wondering all the time why she did not tell what was in her heart.

It would have helped so. If she could have said, "I've met someone who makes everybody else I've ever known in all my life seem sort of dim and far away—someone who fills all my thought—all the world—the sky and stars—"

She might have told Mary this. But out of the confusion, the shamed regret which covered her like a cloud she would have had to say also, "And he kissed me almost the minute we met; I sat up all night with him—slept in his arms—"

So Eve kept silent as she followed the other girl through the house obeying the bride's proud order to inspect everything.

"It's at least a hundred years old, this part of the building. Don't you love the wide doors and the casements? Of course we haven't furnished it all in keeping with the atmosphere, but we'll do this later as our ships keep coming in."

"It's divine, darling. How happy you must be—this lovely home—and the man you love—"

Eve broke off quickly and the blue eyes surveyed her first sharply and then with pity. Of course Eve and Roger had quarreled—why hadn't she thought of it sooner? Naturally the poor kid was hurt, unhappy—

She put her arm around Eve, began to lead her out to the road and on beyond a curve toward another farmhouse, a low Dutch colonial building which was deserted and would have been melancholy but for the flowering shrubs which surrounded it.

"Everyone has misunderstandings," Mary began in a soothing tone. "Even Jimmy and I—why, we almost decided to call it all off the day before the wedding! But things come right if you love enough—truly this is so. You'll see." And she gave Eve a pat, smiling in a knowing manner, feeling she had formed an alliance with Dan Cupid himself in the interests of her friend.

But Eve was thinking, "Oh, you believe that! You believe it because you don't know what can happen, what silly, terrible things you, yourself, might do! Not everything can come right. Not even if —if you love—oh, simply all there is!"

For now she admitted it to herself; she was in love with Kenneth Wilmer. That was why she had let him kiss her, why she had wanted him to kiss her. It was why she kept putting off her departure that night, stopping for another half hour and another till it was too late.

She murmured "Well—" and Mary giggled and said they must look at the old house.

"I've got the gorgeousest plan about it. Listen; why couldn't you live here some day? When—well, you know. You could buy it for a song and Roger—that is," she amended hastily, "whoever you marry would see all that could be done with it."

But Eve was not thinking of Roger as they wandered through the quaint old building. There was a long living room with an enormous fireplace of field-stones and wooden settles at right angles to the hearth and built-in cupboards running the full length of the opposite wall. And as Eve stood there, smiling a little, she had a vision of a fire blazing in that yawning grate; rugs scattered here and there, shaded lamps, easy chairs. And a tall figure lounging in the dimness—a sleekly dark head, dark eyes, watching her in the dancing light . . .

She caught her breath, turned swiftly, went out into the sunshine. And for the remainder of the day she set her mind stubbornly against the thought of Kenneth. She had been silly enough for one while; no use keeping it up the rest of her life.

They had a late dinner and at twilight were lounging about Mary's comfortable living room, trying to decide whether it would be worth while to make waffles and coffee, or just to retire and sleep for ages before the alarm should hail Jimmy forth for his day's work in the city.

And then lights flashed outside as a motor swung to a stop before the gate; an engine roared and died and a door slammed. And Mary exclaimed with surprise when a light step came swiftly across the [illegible] but Eve shrank down in her chair, gasping a little for her heart was in her throat.

Even before she heard his voice, gay and laughing, coming through the dusk, she knew Kenneth Wilmer was at the door.

"You're Mrs. Stewart? Gosh, I had a time to find you! Hope Miss Reade is around—"

It was Jimmy who turned on the light. And then Eve must get up, introduce him, make it appear they were old friends just as if she were not shaking like a leaf, trying to meet his eyes, tearing her own away from his eager look.

How charming and poised he was, coming in here like this, taking both her hands, bending over them in a half mocking, half tender way. Oh, she was proud of him, proud in spite of her shamed memory. And Jimmy liked him on the instant—anyone could see this—though Mary was so amazed as to be a little brusk.

"Mr. Wilmer?" she repeated, as Eve spoke his name. "Not the artist?"

Kenneth turned to her laughing, made a low bow. "Glad to hear I'm not a stranger. And of course I know you; Eve told me a lot." she felt an uprush of delight that he should make it seem so casual, so exactly right. But after a time she grew embarrassed again and announced she meant to go into the kitchen that very minute and make the waffles they had been talking about. No—she didn't wish any help—they were to sit and talk and when everything was on the table she would let them know.

Time to catch her breath out there in Mary's big kitchen as she slipped into a bungalow apron, brought flour and salt and all the things that go into waffles. How strange everything was! She'd have expected him to seem different; she'd have expected something of the faint contempt about him Roger showed those girls up home who trailed back and forth evenings in front of the Mansion House ogling drummers who sat with their feet on the porch rail.

Of course she knew little of worldly ways; she never had been out of the Connecticut village excepting for short visits to the homes of friends who were little more sophisticated than herself. Perhaps she was wrong; perhaps Kenneth didn't despise her after all. . .

She had set the table in the alcove and was standing at the stove flushed by the heat and with all the little curls fluttering like small flames about her forehead, when suddenly he was there beside her. He had slipped in and closed the door, and now he swept her in his arms, kissed her as he had done that night under the willow.

"Did you think you'd get away from me so easily Eve. Rushing off without so much as goodbye? Why, darling? Why did you do that?"

"Ken—" She hid her face against his lapel, clinging to him while the waffles turned gold and then brown and finally began to crisp in an alarming way. "Ken, I thought you'd never want to see me again. Truly I didn't mean to do as I did—drop asleep like that. What your friends must have thought! I—oh, I've been so ashamed—miserable—"

He put his hand beneath her chin, raised it so she had to meet his look. She saw astonishment in his face, amusment too, but mostly incredulity. "Why, you darn kid! You thought—lordy, what a little stiff-neck you are. In The Lane, too—listen to Ken, youngster. You get over that, you hear? Park old ironsides — limber up—act human if you're going to be my girl. You are?" he enquired eagerly. "You're going to be my girl, Eve?"

Half laughing, half crying, but wth a song in her heart she whispered, "Yes, I'm going to be your girl, Ken. Yes, thank you, I'm going to be your girl."

But Mary had something to say about that.

"SHEIK'S WIFE"
BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

EVELYN READE, young and lovely, is making her first journey alone to visit a friend at Haverford. On the train she meets Kenneth Wilmer, famous artist, who saves her from falling from the platform. Attracted by her old-fashioned sweetness, he feels strangely drawn to her and suddenly kisses her. He persuades her to stop in and see the Hollys, friends of his, intead of going on to her destination. She falls asleep on a couch in the living room. Waking in the morning she is panic stricken and stealthily leaves the house. She finally arrives at her friend's home. Mary Stewart thinks Eve came in on the early morning train.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER IV.

THEY had not met since Mary's wedding and the kitchen buzzed with excited questions, half answers, questions again. Eve had been Mary's maid of honor and she met Jimmy Stewart only at the wedding. Now he came in shyly, a likeable gray-eyed boy who kissed her while Mary pretended to be wild with jealousy, and said he hoped she would remain with them all Summer.

"It must be lonesome up in Connecticut. Stay here and show Mary how to manage a high-stepping husband." He grinned at his wife who told him not to worry about Eve.

"She'll have a husband of her own one of these days. How's Roger, darling?"

They were seated in the little breakfast nook which was very bridey with table and chairs painted a bright canary color and gaily flowered china. Mary was pouring coffee, making a great ceremony of it, and she looked up just in time to see her friend's face go scarlet.

It was not the blush of a girl being teased about an old beau and Mary, who was romantic, sensed mystery. Adventure, secrecy, sudden, sweeping emotions —all the things she had missed in her own rather commonplace courtship and marriage she imagined behind the color that went flaming in Eve's face.

And she began to chatter about other things, telling herself the mystery would wait. They would have a long talk the moment Jimmy left for the city. Eve would confide everything just as she always had done all their lives.

But Saturday passed without a word that Mary ached to hear and a long April Sunday moved slowly round the clock. And it was not until Sunday night that Mary began to suspect the cause of her guest's restlessness, her frequent spells of silence, the sudden starts she gave as if brought suddenly from deep sleep.

For on Sunday night Kenneth Wilmer came.

It was a lazy day, that long April Sunday with gentle, fly-away breezes puffing out of nowhere; with white ships of clouds sailing the deep blue overhead and a fortune in the golden coin of dandelions sprinkling itself over the green velvet of the old farmhouse lawn.

Eve helped Mary with breakfast, with the dishes afterward, with "picking up" still later, glancing at the sturdy, rather square little figure of her friend, feeling the kindness of blue eyes, wondering all the time why she did not tell what was in her heart.

It would have helped so. If she could have said, "I've met someone who makes everybody else I've ever known in all my life seem sort of dim and far away—someone who fills all my thought—all the world—the sky and stars—"

She might have told Mary this. But out of the confusion, the shamed regret which covered her like a cloud she would have had to say also, "And he kissed me almost the minute we met; I sat up all night with him—slept in his arms—"

So Eve kept silent as she followed the other girl through the house obeying the bride's proud order to inspect everything.

"It's at least a hundred years old, this part of the building. Don't you love the wide doors and the casements? Of course we haven't furnished it all in keeping with the atmosphere, but we'll do this later as our ships keep coming in."

"It's divine, darling. How happy you must be—this lovely home—and the man you love—"

Eve broke off quickly and the blue eyes surveyed her first sharply and then with pity. Of course Eve and Roger had quarreled—why hadn't she thought of it sooner? Naturally the poor kid was hurt, unhappy—

She put her arm around Eve, began to lead her out to the road and on beyond a curve toward another farmhouse, a low Dutch colonial building which was deserted and would have been melancholy but for the flowering shrubs which surrounded it.

"Everyone has misunderstandings," Mary began in a soothing tone. "Even Jimmy and I—why, we almost decided to call it all off the day before the wedding! But things come right if you love enough—truly this is so. You'll see." And she gave Eve a pat, smiling in a knowing manner, feeling she had formed an alliance with Dan Cupid himself in the interests of her friend.

But Eve was thinking, "Oh, you believe that! You believe it because you don't know what can happen, what silly, terrible things you, yourself, might do! Not everything can come right. Not even if —if you love—oh, simply all there is!"

For now she admitted it to herself; she was in love with Kenneth Wilmer. That was why she had let him kiss her, why she had wanted him to kiss her. It was why she kept putting off her departure that night, stopping for another half hour and another till it was too late.

She murmured "Well—" and Mary giggled and said they must look at the old house.

"I've got the gorgeousest plan about it. Listen; why couldn't you live here some day? When—well, you know. You could buy it for a song and Roger—that is," she amended hastily, "whoever you marry would see all that could be done with it."

But Eve was not thinking of Roger as they wandered through the quaint old building. There was a long living room with an enormous fireplace of field-stones and wooden settles at right angles to the hearth and built-in cupboards running the full length of the opposite wall. And as Eve stood there, smiling a little, she had a vision of a fire blazing in that yawning grate; rugs scattered here and there, shaded lamps, easy chairs. And a tall figure lounging in the dimness—a sleekly dark head, dark eyes, watching her in the dancing light . . .

She caught her breath, turned swiftly, went out into the sunshine. And for the remainder of the day she set her mind stubbornly against the thought of Kenneth. She had been silly enough for one while; no use keeping it up the rest of her life.

They had a late dinner and at twilight were lounging about Mary's comfortable living room, trying to decide whether it would be worth while to make waffles and coffee, or just to retire and sleep for ages before the alarm should hail Jimmy forth for his day's work in the city.

And then lights flashed outside as a motor swung to a stop before the gate; an engine roared and died and a door slammed. And Mary exclaimed with surprise when a light step came swiftly across the [illegible] but Eve shrank down in her chair, gasping a little for her heart was in her throat.

Even before she heard his voice, gay and laughing, coming through the dusk, she knew Kenneth Wilmer was at the door.

"You're Mrs. Stewart? Gosh, I had a time to find you! Hope Miss Reade is around—"

It was Jimmy who turned on the light. And then Eve must get up, introduce him, make it appear they were old friends just as if she were not shaking like a leaf, trying to meet his eyes, tearing her own away from his eager look.

How charming and poised he was, coming in here like this, taking both her hands, bending over them in a half mocking, half tender way. Oh, she was proud of him, proud in spite of her shamed memory. And Jimmy liked him on the instant—anyone could see this—though Mary was so amazed as to be a little brusk.

"Mr. Wilmer?" she repeated, as Eve spoke his name. "Not the artist?"

Kenneth turned to her laughing, made a low bow. "Glad to hear I'm not a stranger. And of course I know you; Eve told me a lot." she felt an uprush of delight that he should make it seem so casual, so exactly right. But after a time she grew embarrassed again and announced she meant to go into the kitchen that very minute and make the waffles they had been talking about. No—she didn't wish any help—they were to sit and talk and when everything was on the table she would let them know.

Time to catch her breath out there in Mary's big kitchen as she slipped into a bungalow apron, brought flour and salt and all the things that go into waffles. How strange everything was! She'd have expected him to seem different; she'd have expected something of the faint contempt about him Roger showed those girls up home who trailed back and forth evenings in front of the Mansion House ogling drummers who sat with their feet on the porch rail.

Of course she knew little of worldly ways; she never had been out of the Connecticut village excepting for short visits to the homes of friends who were little more sophisticated than herself. Perhaps she was wrong; perhaps Kenneth didn't despise her after all. . .

She had set the table in the alcove and was standing at the stove flushed by the heat and with all the little curls fluttering like small flames about her forehead, when suddenly he was there beside her. He had slipped in and closed the door, and now he swept her in his arms, kissed her as he had done that night under the willow.

"Did you think you'd get away from me so easily Eve. Rushing off without so much as goodbye? Why, darling? Why did you do that?"

"Ken—" She hid her face against his lapel, clinging to him while the waffles turned gold and then brown and finally began to crisp in an alarming way. "Ken, I thought you'd never want to see me again. Truly I didn't mean to do as I did—drop asleep like that. What your friends must have thought! I—oh, I've been so ashamed—miserable—"

He put his hand beneath her chin, raised it so she had to meet his look. She saw astonishment in his face, amusment too, but mostly incredulity. "Why, you darn kid! You thought—lordy, what a little stiff-neck you are. In The Lane, too—listen to Ken, youngster. You get over that, you hear? Park old ironsides — limber up—act human if you're going to be my girl. You are?" he enquired eagerly. "You're going to be my girl, Eve?"

Half laughing, half crying, but with a song in her heart she whispered, "Yes, I'm going to be your girl, Ken. Yes, thank you, I'm going to be your girl."

But Mary had something to say about that.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL SEASON INTO SECOND STAGE

ALL LEAGUE TEAMS CHANGE THEIR OPPONENTS

RAIN, COLD WEATHER KEPT 8 OF 16 MAJOR TEAMS IDLE YESTERDAY

RAISE ANEW QUESTION IF CLUB OWNERS ARE NOT FORCING STARTING SEASON

The major league baseball season today moved into its second stage, with all of the American League teams and the eastern National League clubs changing opponents. After the second series the clubs which opened the season on the road will move to their home stadiums for their inaugurals, April 22.

Rain and cold weather kept eight of 16 major league teams idle yesterday and raised anew the question of whether club owners may not be forcing the season by starting their schedules early in April.

Of the 25 games scheduled to date only 14 have been played. The opening series at St. Louis and Cincinnati are the only ones which have not been cut short by bad weather—and yesterday's game at St. Louis was halted by rain in the seventh.

Cleveland's Indians and the Chicago White Sox played the twice postponed American League opener at Chicago, the Sox winning 8 to 7. Metzler's double in the tenth scored Cissell with the deciding run.

Today the Indians move to Detroit while the Sox entertain the St. Louis Browns.

The Kansas City Blues and Indianapolis were again kept indoors because of rain.

Yesterday's hero—Larry French, 21-year-old southpaw, who started his second season with the Pittsburgh Pirates by holding the Cincinnati Reds to two hits. French hurled hitless ball until the seventh, when Bob Meusel singled. Allen's homer in the ninth prevented French from registering a shutout. The score was 7 to 1.

A hail storm halted the Detroit-St. Louis game in the sixth inning, with the Tigers leading 6 to 1. Earl Whitehill allowed the Browns only three hits.

Rain robbed he New York Yankees of an opportunity to even their series with the Philadelphia Athletics, and the New Yorkers went to Boston for three games in two days against the Red Sox. The Red Sox and Washington also were rained out, the Senators moving on to Philadelphia where they will meet the Athletics today.

Chicago's Cubs assured themselves of at least an even break in their four-game series with the St. Louis Cards, taking yesterday's seven-inning contest, 3 to 0. Pat Malone held the Cards to three hits.

Rain kept the Giants, Braves, Robins and Phils idle for the second consecutive day.

Association Tabs

Despite a Columbus rally in the ninth inning, St. Paul evened the opening series with the Senators by winning 6 to 5. Wilcy Moore held the Senators for eight innings before being chased from the mound. The Saints had seven hits to the Senators' 12.

Toledo made it two straight by defeating Minneapolis, 5 to 1, in a game called because of rain after the Millers had batted in the sixth. Freddy Heimach allowed the Millers only four hits, while John Brillheart was hit 11 times by the Mudhens.

A ninth inning finish gave Louisville its third straight win over Milwaukee, 6 to 5. With the score tied and the bases filled, Billy Herman, Colonel second baseman, came through with a single. Buvid was wild, allowing the Colonels nine hits, while Tincup, relieving Weinert, stopped the Brewers at 12.

BURT SHOTTON TELLS U. P. THE INSIDE STORY

PHILS FINISHED LAST IN 1928, FIFTH IN 1929, .181 POINTS HIGHER

HASN'T COST A DIME TO PUT TOGETHER A PENNANT CONTENDER

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, April 18. — The inside story of how he built the Phillies into a formidable team in two years on a shoe-string was told to the United Press today by Manager Burt Shotton. The Phils finished last in 1928 and fifth last year—.181 points higher.

"It hasn't cost a dime to put together this team which I consider ever inch a pennant contender," said Shotton, as the Phillies moved into the Polo Grounds to open a four-game series today with the New York Giants.

"The revenue I received from the O'Doul-Leach deal with the Giants and money obtained from other players has balanced the cash we had to spend."

Checking over the 1930 team with Shotton it was revealed that less than $75,000 was involved in acquiring all his players.

Here's how Shotton got his regulars:
1b, Hurst—trade, Cardinals.
2b, Thompson—already on hand.
ss, Thevenow—trade, Cardinals.
3b, Whitney—draft, $4,000.
lf, O'Doul—trade, Giants.
cf, Southern—recalled.
rf, Klein—bought, $7,500.
c, Davis—trade, Cardinals.
c, McCurdy—trade, Cardinals.
p, Sweetland—draft, $2,500.
p, Koupal—trade, Brooklyn.
p, Alexander—trade, Cardinals.
p, Benge—draft, $4,000.
p, Willoughby—already on hand.
p, Smythe—trade, Asheville.

There are only four players — Friberg, Thompson, Willoughby and Williams—on the Phillies who were there when Shotton arrived in 1928 to take charge of the team.

Four smart trades played a prominent part in building up the team. Shotton's version of the famous O'Doul-Leach trade follows:

"We got enough money from the Giants in addition to O'Doul to balance a previous trade we had made with the Cardinals in which we got Hurst, Thevenow, Davis and Peel. At the time we made the O'Doul-Leach trade, we had no idea O'Doul would become the National League batting champion. We figured it about an even up trade."

In two trades with the Cardinals, in 1928 and this winter, the Phillies obtained five regulars—Davis, McCurdy, Alexander, Hurst and Thevenow—and parted with only Catcher Jimmy Wilson, Peel, who had previously been obtained in the first deal with the Cards, and Bob McGraw, now back in the minors.

D Ball Opens Today

The J. C. Penney and Montgomery Ward teams will play the first game of the kittenball season at the grounds near the water tower this evening.

Washington, April 18.—(UP)—An investigation of all postoffice leases was ordered by the senate today.

The senate approved without a single objection the Blaine resolution authorizing creation of a senatorial committee to five members to make the investigation.

Those Bad Decisions

By HARDIN BURNLEY

© 1930, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved

NEW YORK CITY has been providing sportdom with something akin to Chicago's stockyards in their most odoriferous days, namely—some of the worst boxing decisions ever known in the none too perfumed annals of pugilism.

Under the Walker law and the New York State Athletic Commission rules, a bout which goes the limit is decided by a unanimous or a majority vote of the referee and two judges. Each official awards each round to one of the contestants or calls it even. The winner of the majority of rounds is supposed to be chosen as victor of the bout on the individual ballot of the referee and the two judges, composite round scores not counting.

At its best, judging bouts puts a severe strain on the human equation, freighted as we all are with manifest or subconscious prejudices for one or more of the many styles of boxing; the looks, reputation, manners, color or race of the various contestants.

Further, we all view fights from different physical angles. For just one example, the referee may see two hard left hooks to the body which may be missed, seemed light, or appear blocked to one or both judges whose visions are momentarily obscured by the boxers' bodies. Likewise the referee frequently is out of vision of important blows.

There is every intelligent excuse for wrong decisions in close, fast bouts, but when the milling is wide open most of the way and as easy to follow as it was in the recent Campolo-Risko bouts at Miami and New York City, the decisions there rendered are hard to explain without resorting to the words "blind" or "dumb." Risko really won that Florida tenrounder, but the referee called it a draw. Campolo clearly defeated Johnny in their Gotham go, but another weird 2-1 vote gave Risko the duke.

Much talk of shaking up New York's judges, and the referees especially, is heard. Meanwhile the gamblers grin, usually in private; and there is much to-do over those decisions which seem worse than "dumb."

Checking over the 1930 team with Shotton it was revealed that less than $75,000 was involved in acquiring all his players.

Here's how Shotton got his regulars:
1b, Hurst—trade, Cardinals.
2b, Thompson—already on hand.
ss, Thevenow—trade, Cardinals.
3b, Whitney—draft, $4,000.
lf, O'Doul—trade, Giants.
cf, Southern—recalled.
rf, Klein—bought, $7,500.
c, Davis—trade, Cardinals.
c, McCurdy—trade, Cardinals.
p, Sweetland—draft, $2,500.
p, Koupal—trade, Brooklyn.
p, Alexander—trade, Cardinals.
p, Benge—draft, $4,000.
p, Willoughby—already on hand.
p, Smythe—trade, Asheville.

There are only four players — Friberg, Thompson, Willoughby and Williams—on the Phillies who were there when Shotton arrived in 1928 to take charge of the team.

Four smart trades played a prominent part in building up the team. Shotton's version of the famous O'Doul-Leach trade follows:

"We got enough money from the Giants in addition to O'Doul to balance a previous trade we had made with the Cardinals in which we got Hurst, Thevenow, Davis and Peel. At the time we made the O'Doul-Leach trade, we had no idea O'Doul would become the National League batting champion. We figured it about an even up trade."

In two trades with the Cardinals, in 1928 and this winter, the Phillies obtained five regulars—Davis, McCurdy, Alexander, Hurst and Thevenow—and parted with only Catcher Jimmy Wilson, Peel, who had previously been obtained in the first deal with the Cards, and Bob McGraw, now back in the minors.

Those Bad Decisions

By HARDIN BURNLEY

© 1930, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved

NEW YORK CITY has been providing sportdom with something akin to Chicago's stockyards in their most odoriferous days, namely—some of the worst boxing decisions ever known in the none too perfumed annals of pugilism.

Under the Walker law and the New York State Athletic Commission rules, a bout which goes the limit is decided by a unanimous or a majority vote of the referee and two judges. Each official awards each round to one of the contestants or calls it even. The winner of the majority of rounds is supposed to be chosen as victor of the bout on the individual ballot of the referee and the two judges, composite round scores not counting.

At its best, judging bouts puts a severe strain on the human equation, freighted as we all are with manifest or subconscious prejudices for one or more of the many styles of boxing; the looks, reputation, manners, color or race of the various contestants.

Further, we all view fights from different physical angles. For just one example, the referee may see two hard left hooks to the body which may be missed, seemed light, or appear blocked to one or both judges whose visions are momentarily obscured by the boxers' bodies. Likewise the referee frequently is out of vision of important blows.

There is every intelligent excuse for wrong decisions in close, fast bouts, but when the milling is wide open most of the way and as easy to follow as it was in the recent Campolo-Risko bouts at Miami and New York City, the decisions there rendered are hard to explain without resorting to the words "blind" or "dumb." Risko really won that Florida ten-rounder, but the referee called it a draw. Campolo clearly defeated Johnny in their Gotham go, but another weird 2-1 vote gave Risko the duke.

Much talk of shaking up New York's judges, and the referees especially, is heard. Meanwhile the gamblers grin, usually in private; and there is much to-do over those decisions which seem worse than "dumb."

The uniforms of the St. Cloud-Brainerd team will be blue and red. The suits will be ready in a short time and it is expected they will be shipped to the team at Northfield shortly. The latest bulletin issued by John H. Farrell, secretary of the National Association of professional baseball leagues contains the following: The Northern league, embracing the territory of Fargo, Grand Forks, Winnipeg, Duluth, Crookston and St. Cloud-Brainerd has qualified for membership.

Mrs. Ida Pauley is sure she was fleeced of a quantity of money this morning by a strange young lady. She went to the lobby of the postoffice and while writing an address at the desk in the lobby laid her pocketbook down for a minute. She is sure the young woman snatched the purse and walked out. It contained $21.

Henry Moberg, the Laurel street saloonkeeper has rented one of the store rooms in the Miracle block and will probably move there from the Pearce block the first of next week.

Wallace Lind of the city left this afternoon for St. Paul where he will take the preliminary examination for admission to the Annapolis naval academy.

Henry I. Cohen is moving today from his offices in the Sleeper block to the R. G. Vallentyne offices in the First National bank block.

Ole Peterson, the meat dealer, left for Walker this afternoon on business

Commencement exercises will be on June 6 again this year.

Six fire alarms were turned in Saturday from different parts of the city and yet comparatively little damage was done. The first alarm was at the Kaatz furniture store, the next was to a house on Norwood street where there was a chimney fire. The third was the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Holst, with no damage done. The others were the home of Mrs. Riddle on Bluff and of George Moran on Rosewood street. Losses were covered by insurance.

April 18, 1905

A. D. Polk has resigned as county attorney of Crow Wing county. He had made no mention of his intentions to a soul until he handed in a brief letter at the close of the meeting of the county commissioners at the court house last evening. Mr. Polk defeated W. H. Crowell by an overwhelming majority at the last election. He is a popular official as well as being one of the most influential members of the bar of northern Minnesota.

The third annual convention of the Crow Wing county Sunday school convention was convened this afternoon at Deerwood. About 40 delegates went up from Brainerd.

At the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Teachers association held at St. Cloud, superintendent T. B. Hartley of Brainerd was elected president. The honor came unsolicited, in fact, Mr. Hartley did not happen to be at the meeting. Attorney A. T. Larson of the city gave an address at the meeting.

At the meeting of the city council last evening, W. P. Locke was appointed as sanitary police; P. M. Johnson was appointed to the position of first assistant chief; it was voted unanimously to pay the $225 for the horse which died which had been purchased recently for the fire team; Henry Squires was elected alderman from the Fourth ward, succeeding Thos. H. Murphy, deceased and the salary of the city assessor was decided at $700.

A fierce fire raged at Tenstrike up on the M. & I. last night when 100,000 cedar posts were burned. It was one of the fiercest fires ever seen and for a time the whole town was threatened.

Edward Boyle, brother of James Boyle, captain of the 1904 University of Indiana baseball club, has been elected to succeed his brother. He is a second baseman and one of the strongest players on the team. He is a Delta Tau Delta.

"Slightly Scarlet"

There is charm and any number of diverting twists to the story of "Slightly Scarlet," Paramount's latest all-talking picture, co-starring Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent. To begin with, "Slightly Scarlet," has been expertly produced in which a minimum amount of attention has been devoted to irrelevant details and a maximum amount of attention to the interesting and suspense-filled situations with which this picture abounds. And with so fast moving a structure with which to work, the cast, particularly Mr. Brook and Miss Brent, display a contagious enthusiasm and zest for their roles that makes for flowing, first rate entertainment.

"Slightly Scarlet," which was directed by Louis Gasnier and Edwin Knopf, opened a two day engagament at the Paramount theatre yesterday afternoon.

Passion Week Messages

The World's Day of Triumph

This is the day when great events moved rapidly.
Our Lord fights his greatest battle in Gethsemane.
Subjects himself to arrest.
Is denied by a dearest friend.
A criminal before a world court.
Sentenced by a coward.
Falls under the load of his cross, on the way to Calvary.
His cross is the central cross.
He leaves living messages.
The world pronounces him dead.
And the tomb is sealed.
And those who loved him, bow in sorrow.

The day of the world's triumph.
God is on the Cross, Satan on the Throne.
Christ has been hurled from the mountain top to the depths of the valley.
Shadows flit everywhere.
The sun robes itself in shame.
The chill paralyses.

Was not the world dead for a day?
And we who love Him watch Him there!

Pastor, First Presbyterian Church.

SERVICE AT 620 FRONT STREET

Rev. F. A. Kufus Delivers Message to the Audience in Beautiful Language

Standing room was at a premium, in connection with the last morning service of the Brainerd community observance of Passion Week, at 620 Front street, where all of the daily services have been conducted.

In his message the Rev. F. A. Kufus pictured the experience of Jesus in the garden of Gethsemane, the betroyal by Judas, the false accusation by the enemies of Jesus, the giving way of Peter in his denial of the Lord, the load of the cross, the thrusting into service of the man of Cyrene, the nailing of Jesus to the cross and the raising of the cross placing Him between earth and heaven. The speaker said, "Today we are reminded that Jesus is the Lamb of God slain from before the foundation of the world, for His suffering began before the hour of His crucifixion. In the hour of His sacrifice we can see the beauty of His life in that He didn't lose control of Himself, but prayed for forgiveness for His enemies, and expressed wonderful faith in God. There are three symbols of the Christ—the cradle, the cross and the empty sepulchre. We all like to celebrate His birth and resurrection, but some of us shrink from His cross. And yet there we learn He made the supreme sacrifice for the sins of the world. The world could not be redeemed without that sacrifice. It ought to be the beginning of a continuous sacrifice expressed in our lives. From the cross He calls upon us as members of His church, to enter into His sacrifice, which means our redemption, and which, through us, will mean redemption to others."

Rev. N. P. Olmsted, who presided at this morning's meeting expressed the appreciation of the members of the Brainerd Ministerial Association, of the splendid cooperation of the Gould-Gray Realty company, the Brainerd Daily Dispatch, the Folsom Music company, W. E. Lewis Transfer company, the business firms of the city for window card space, the Baptist and Presbyterian churches, the Y. M. C. A., the committee on arrangements and all who contributed in any way toward the success of the observance.

TWO HURT IN CAR SMASH DOWN TOWN

Holdingsford Farmer Charged With Reckless Driving; Case Being Tried Today

Two were hurt when two cars collided at the intersection of Laurel and Sixth streets about 11:15 p. m. yesterday.

Emil Lunde, South Fifth street, and Mrs. Melvin Gorden, 512 Quince street, occupants of the car driven by Mr. Gorden were given medical treatment after the accident. Lunde was taken to the St. Joseph's hospital where ten stitches were needed to sew the cuts on his forehead. Mrs. Gorden received a bump on her head.

Frank Marsolek, farmer living near Holdingsford, was arraigned this morning on the charge of reckless driving in connection with the accident. Evidence was still being heard by Judge J. H. Warner in municipal court at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The accident occurred when Gorden was driving his car west on Laurel street and Marsolek was crossing the intersection south on Sixth street. The Marsolek car caught the Gorden car in the rear fender and pulled it over to the curb on the southwest corner. Glass in the Gorden car was shattered and the left rear wheel smashed. The Marsolek car had little damage.

Varying stories as to the speed of the Marsolek car were told by witnesses. Marsolek contended he was travelling in second gear and was not going more than ten miles an hour, in the face of other testimony that he was travelling between 30 and 35 miles an hour.

Clara and Evelyn Marsolek stated that they came to Brainerd from Duluth last evening and were met at the train by their father.

Clara stated that because the engine of the car was cold her father had travelled in first gear from the N. P. depot to the Sixth street crossing and had continued from there until the crash in second gear. She said that her father stopped the car immediately after the accident in the intersection and then crossed the intersection to park opposite the Cottage Grill.

The crash and breaking of glass was heard by pedestrians for several blocks and attracted a large number of people to the scene. Glass was strewn over the street.

Emil Lunde, his ehad bandaged, was able to testify in the case.

City Attorney D. H. Fullerton conducted the prosecution while Attorney W. W. Bane represented Marsolek.

RELICS OF CHRIST'S DAYS EXHIBITED IN ROME CEREMONIES

"MASS OF THE PRE-SANCTIFIED" CELEBRATED IN CHURCHES OF ROME

ST. GERVAIS CHURCH IN PARIS RECALLS GOOD FRIDAY OF WORLD WAR DAYS

Rome, April 18.—(U.P.)—Good Friday was solemnly celebrated in all the principal churches of Rome by the "mass of the pre-sanctified," the singing of the Passion, processions inside the churches to honor the relics of the true cross and the singing of the "Tenebrae."

The principal ceremonies occurred in St. Peter's and St. John Lateran, wherein are respectively preserved a large relic of the true cross, and what, according to sacred tradition, are the heads of the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul. In the latter basilica the exposition of the relic of some boards of the table whereon Christ gave the Last Supper continued to be shown to the faithful and the thousands of tourists who have crowded into Rome for Holy Week.

In St. Peter's a procession took place to the Pauline Chapel, where the precious relic of the true cross was shown for the adoration of the faithful. The cardinal archpriest of the basilica, Eugenio Pacelli, officiated.

A great many of the old small churches of Rome were open today for the one occasion in the year, and tourists and archeologists took occasion to visit them. Tomorrow and Easter Sunday a further number of old unusued churches thow open their doors to the public.

Today was observed as a public half-holiday.

Anticoli Corrado, Italy, April 18.—The coffin, symbolic of Christ's death was borne aloft by faithful disciples, Judas Iscariot, impersonated by the village half-wit, was chased and clubbed, while Mary, represented by a devout mother, was comforted by the other women in this picturesque little village, lying about 35 miles from Rome, today when it celebrated its original and curious annual folklore festival recalling the crucifixion.

It was something in the nature of a pastoral Passion play, or "Mystery," which was witnessed today by a small group of foreigners and hundreds of peasants from the nearby villages.

A coffin supposed to contain the body of Christ was taken from the village church and carried in solemn procession, headed by the local priests. Hymns of mourning were chanted as the simple little procession passed along the hilly, winding paths which thread the village.

Anticoli Corrado is a kind of small Oberamergau. The inhabitants have the tradition of acting, and the village girls have long been famed for their beauty.

Paris, April 18—Good Friday masses were celebrated today in the churches of Paris, especially in the ancient church of St. Gervais, for the memory of those innocent inhabitants killed and injured in the long range bombardment of Paris in the spring of 1918.

The solemn masses renewed the picture of those days when from out a clear sky a bursting shell whizzed down and spread death and wreckage throughout Paris.

Scores were killed in the bombardment which went on for days.

The outstanding tragedy was the hitting of the church of St. Gervais on Good Friday. The church was crowded. Down from the blue came a shell, exploding on the gray top of the old church. Dust, plaster, stone and glass fell on the huddled worshippers. The walls crumbled overhead, falling in a massed and broken heap.

Eighty-eight were killed and 68 injured.

Jerusalem, April 18.—Dressed in the flowing robes of ancient Biblical peoples, Aimee Semple McPherson, fiery evangelist of Los Angeles, and her 64 pilgrims were carefully guarded by Palestine detectives as they visited traditional holy places today.

Mrs. McPherson plans to be baptized in the River Jordan tomorrow.

Although the party has visited Bethany and the Via Doloroso, authorities have restricted their stay in Palestine.

House and Senate Agree on Tariff Rate on Casein

Washington, April 18.—(U.P.)—House and senate tariff conferees adopted today the senate duty of 5½ cents per pound on casein, one of the most controversial items in the tariff measure.

DOUBTS IF PROHIBITION CAN BE ENFORCED

Washington, April 18—(U.P.)—A letter written by W. H. Stayton, chairman of the board of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and read today before the senate lobby committee credited President Herbert Hoover with beginning "to doubt whether prohibition can be enforced."

The letter was written to Charles S. Wood, a vice president of the anti-dry organization.

Report Merger of Sears Roebuck & Co., Montgomery Ward & Co.

Philadelphia, April 18.—(U.P.)—Lessing J. Rosenwald, vice president in charge of the local Sears Roebuck interests, today practically confirmed reports of a merger of Sears Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co., the two largest mail order houses in the country.

"The report, as far as I know, is substantially correct," Rosenwald said. "But it is entirely unofficial as the matter has not been brought before the board of directors."

LOS ANGELES MATRON FACES MURDER CHARGE

MRS. WALBRUGA OESTERRICH IS LODGED IN THE COUNTY JAIL

NEARBY, IN ANOTHER CELL, IS HER DEJECTED ATTIC LOVER

Los Angeles, April 18.—(U.P.) — Mrs. Walbruga Oesterrich was back in the county jail today, charged, for the second time in eight years, with murder.

Nearby, in another cell, sat a dejected little man who lived for eighteen years in an attic that he might be near Mrs. Oesterrich. He was Otto Sanhuber, jointly accused with the woman of the murder of her husband, Fred Oesterrich, Milwaukee manufacturer.

The widow's arraignment yesterday after an indictment a few hours earlier, was her second experience of that kind. Several months after Oesterrich was murdered in his home here, Mrs. Oesterrich was held for the slaying.

She gained freedom when authorities accepted her story that burglars had shot Oesterrich and then locked her in the closet where neighbors had found her.

Sanhuber pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity yesterday. He was indicted no a charge several days ago, after assertedly confessing that he shot the manufacturer in defending Mrs. Oesterrich.

TRUCK OWNERS AND MOTORISTS CAUTIONED

Truck owners are urged to postpone all heavy hauling and motorists generally are cautioned to avoid needless travel, in a statement issued today by Commissioner C. M. Babcock, in connection with the Highway department's weekly road condition report.

Rains and rapid thawing of the frost in the sub-grade have caused serious damage to many of the unpaved highways, and most of the state routes are reported as only fair to poor. They are generally passable to light traffic, and if travel can be reduced to a minimum, most of the routes can probably be kept open.

Load restrictions of 2½ to 3 tons are posted on many of the unpaved routes, but whether soch load limits are posted or not, persons who start out with too heavy loads run the risk of being mired, with heavy loss or expense in being pulled out. If they exceed the legal or posted load limits they also face the possibility of arrest and prosecution.

Detailed reports follow on trunk highways in the Brainerd Lake Region:

T. H. No. 2—Duluth, Brainerd, Wadena, Detroit Lakes and Moorhead—260 miles—Duluth, paved—Carlton, fair, (3 tons)—McGregor, good—Motley, good, fair—Staples, good—Wadena fair, (3 tons)—Perham, fair—Detroit Lakes, good—Hawley, paved—Moorhead.

T. H. No. 19—Brainerd, Walker and Cass Lake—93 miles—Brainerd, good—Pine River, detour, fair—Backus, good—Cass Lake.

RECOVER 6 BODIES FROM CHARRED DEBRIS OF FIRE

MOST DISASTROUS FIRE IN HISTORY OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE NOW PLACES DEAD AT 20, SEARCH FOR BODIES CONTINUES

Iloilo, P. I., April 18.—(U.P.)—The constabulary on the Island of Occidental Negroes today recovered six bodies from the charred debris of the most disastrous fire in the history of the Philippine Islands.

A conservative estimate placed the dead at 20, it being known that others still were buried beneath the wreckage. The search for bodies continued today unabated amid scenes of horrible desolation.

The fire laid waste many homes in the villages of Sagay and Fabrica and for a time threatened Cadiz. The conflagration started in a lumber mill at Sagay.

H. C. Pope, assistant general superintendent of the Fabrica mills, said that more than 5,000,000 feet of mahogany, the entire mill equipment, 300 company houses and more than 100 private homes were razed by the fire.

In addition the postoffice, grocery stores and warehouses were burned. Thieves rifled the post office safe, Pope said, obtaining about $1,000 and some important documents.

Health officers are attempting to prevent epidemics while the constabulary is guarding against further looting.

Total loss, it is estimated, will exceed $5,000,000.

"SHEIK'S WIFE"

BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

EVELYN READE, young and lovely, is making her first journey alone to visit a friend at Haverford. On the train she meets Kenneth Wilmer, famous artist, who saves her from falling from the platform. Attracted by her old-fashioned sweetness, he feels strangely drawn to her and suddenly kisses her. He persuades her to stop in and see the Hollys, friends of his, intead of going on to her destination. She falls asleep on a couch in the living room. Waking in the morning she is panic striken and stealthily leaves the house. She finally arrives at her friend's home. Mary Stewart thinks Eve came in on the early morning train. Sunday evening Kenneth Wilmer comes to call.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER V.

THEY were very gay over the waffles and the maple syrup Mary brought from the cellar at the last moment. Kenneth, Eve saw, had the gift of easy popularity; of making quick, warm friendships, adapting himself to the viewpoint and manner and life of whomever he found himself with. It was a long while before she learned that this was merely a surface affability, that the tall boy was too dyed-in-the-wool Bohemian to be entirely happy with any but his own kind.

Jimmy, who was in a Wall Street office, politely mentioned art, but Kenneth turned the conversation to aviation instead. They all were interested in this and he told of a member of The Lane colony, Norwood O'Rell, author of at least two successful novels, who kept an old "crate" on his place and often went loitering about high over hills and river when he had finished his work for the day.

O'Rell had been with the aviation corps in France and Eve had read his exciting tales of battles fought in the sky. And when Ken promised to bring him to call some evening she felt the interest natural to the average person at contact with any who have achieved recognition through creative art.

But more than the prospect of meeting "Nory" it was Ken's modesty, his tactful refusal to talk of himself and his work which thrilled her. Despite his youth this boy was one of the most popular creators of girl portraits; month after month his girl faces decorated every news stand in America on magazine covers, and his illustrations appeared all through magazine pages.

Yet try as Mary might—and did—not a word could she get him to say of himself save that he had begun young; that his family had been hard up and couldn't send him to college so he went right from high school to do commercial illustrating at an advertising house. He attended art school at night and sort of "branched" out," as he put it, afterward.

And this was another thing Eve was to learn through Ken, that artists, writers, composers—those actually and successfully engaged in creative work—have little to say about their activities excepting perhaps to other artists, writers and composers; and that they go through none of the traditional gestures of frenzied genius, saving their energy for their work instead. It is those in whom the will to write or draw or compose passes for ability who babble and tear their hair and arouse public disgust for what is known as "temperament."

There is plenty of temperament among workers in every branch of creative art, but it does not express itself in blatant idiocy.

Eleven o'clock struck before Jimmy gave a surprised glance around and said he must think of turning in. "Monday's a hard day in my shop," he apologized. "You folks go on with the party though—Mary's a lazybones who can snooze all day," he grinned. "I don't suppose you're ever driven?" he asked Ken rather wistfully.

"Am I not! Fellows like you don't know your luck. I've got two wild-eyed editors on my trail right now. . . And it's time for me to start back. This worthless redhead," he chuckled and put his hand on Eve's arm—touched her lightly, but with a suggestion of caress that brought the blood surging into her face—"forgot to leave your address. I must have asked at every house between here and The Lane where Stewart lived. If your name isn't known all over Rockfield County it won't be my fault."

He shook hands with Jimmy and met for a long estatic moment. She trembled with the sweetness of it, feeling herself caught with him in a flame of passion which seemed to burn out separate individuality, fuse them into one being.

They were silent when they dropped apart and each could see that the other was rather white, startled and shaken.

He put his hands on her arms, looking at her in a tense, grave way. "I love you, Eve," he said huskily.

"Ken—oh, Ken!"

When she came in, star-eyed, Mary was waiting. Little, dependable, unimaginative Mary with her yearning for romance—her yearning which would take her a short way on the path to adventure and then send her scurrying back to safe, solid things. Mary with her small, square figure casting an anxious housewife's eye over the living room even as she turned anxiously to her friend.

"Darling, I don't blame you for being carried away. He is charming. But—"

"I love you, Eve," He Said, Huskily.

Mary, inviting them to visit his cottage, and dropped an arm about Eve, taking it for granted she would walk to the gate with him. She said, "In a second, Mary—don't wait—" And meant to hurry back, to conform to the circumspect standards which were Mary's and Jimmy's and which always had been hers.

But the night was full of enchantment and out in the shadows of lilacs and syringas just bursting into leaf Ken's arms were around her again, his kisses on her hair and eyes and lips.

"Sweetheart—gorgeous girl . . . what if I hadn't found you? You wont go away from me again? Say you wont leave me again, Eve . . ."

She was stirred by the emotion in his voice, moved to a deep solemnity. Did he care so much? Oh—a hundredth part as much as she cared — could he do this? "Ken," she murmured. "Why, Ken, darling—"

"Kiss me, Eve. No—your arms around me— you know you hadn't kiss— ? I've always been the o—

She slip— —s around his neck, lace— —rs together, drew his h— their lips

Eve went over quickly, kissed her, laughing all the while. "You're going to say, 'but he isn't Jimmy.' And that is all right; there isn't two of anybody. Well, then?"

"Oh, Eve, do listen. I'm older than you—"

"Two years—"

"—and married—"

"Six months. Why all the sophistication, dear?"

Eve smiled, dreaming over those moments at the gate. "But this difference, Mary — maybe it's a nice difference?"

RELICS OF CHRIST'S DAYS EXHIBITED IN ROME CEREMONIES

"MASS OF THE PRE-SANCTIFIED" CELEBRATED IN CHURCHES OF ROME

ST. GERVAIS CHURCH IN PARIS RECALLS GOOD FRIDAY OF WORLD WAR DAYS

Rome, April 18.—(U.P.)—Good Friday was solemnly celebrated in all the principal churches of Rome by the "mass of the pre-sanctified," the singing of the Passion, processions inside the churches to honor the relics of the true cross and the singing of the "Tenebrae."

The principal ceremonies occurred in St. Peter's and St. John Lateran, wherein are respectively preserved a large relic of the true cross, and what, according to sacred tradition, are the heads of the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul. In the latter basilica the exposition of the relic of some boards of the table whereon Christ gave the Last Supper continued to be shown to the faithful and the thousands of tourists who have crowded into Rome for Holy Week.

In St. Peter's a procession took place to the Pauline Chapel, where the precious relic of the true cross was shown for the adoration of the faithful. The cardinal archpriest of the basilica, Eugenio Pacelli, officiated.

A great many of the old small churches of Rome were open today for the one occasion in the year, and tourists and archeologists took occasion to visit them. Tomorrow and Easter Sunday a further number of old unusued churches thow open their doors to the public.

Today was observed as a public half-holiday.

Anticoli Corrado, Italy, April 18.—The coffin, symbolic of Christ's death was borne aloft by faithful disciples, Judas Iscariot, impersonated by the village half-wit, was chased and clubbed, while Mary, represented by a devout mother, was comforted by the other women in this picturesque little village, lying about 35 miles from Rome, today when it celebrated its original and curious annual folklore festival recalling the crucifixion.

It was something in the nature of a pastoral Passion play, or "Mystery," which was witnessed today by a small group of foreigners and hundreds of peasants from the nearby villages.

A coffin supposed to contain the body of Christ was taken from the village church and carried in solemn procession, headed by the local priests. Hymns of mourning were chanted as the simple little procession passed along the hilly, winding paths which thread the village.

Anticoli Corrado is a kind of small Oberamergau. The inhabitants have the tradition of acting, and the village girls have long been famed for their beauty.

Paris, April 18—Good Friday masses were celebrated today in the churches of Paris, especially in the ancient church of St. Gervais, for the memory of those innocent inhabitants killed and injured in the long range bombardment of Paris in the spring of 1918.

The solemn masses renewed the picture of those days when from out a clear sky a bursting shell whizzed down and spread death and wreckage throughout Paris.

Scores were killed in the bombardment which went on for days.

The outstanding tragedy was the hitting of the church of St. Gervais on Good Friday. The church was crowded. Down from the blue came a shell, exploding on the gray top of the old church. Dust, plaster, stone and glass fell on the huddled worshippers. The walls crumbled overhead, falling in a massed and broken heap.

Eighty-eight were killed and 68 injured.

Jerusalem, April 18.—Dressed in the flowing robes of ancient Biblical peoples, Aimee Semple McPherson, fiery evangelist of Los Angeles, and her 64 pilgrims were carefully guarded by Palestine detectives as they visited traditional holy places today.

Mrs. McPherson plans to be baptized in the River Jordan tomorrow.

Although the party has visited Bethany and the Via Doloroso, authorities have restricted their stay in Palestine.

House and Senate Agree on Tariff Rate on Casein

Washington, April 18.—(U.P.)—House and senate tariff conferees adopted today the senate duty of 5½ cents per pound on casein, one of the most controversial items in the tariff measure.

DOUBTS IF PROHIBITION CAN BE ENFORCED

Washington, April 18—(U.P.)—A letter written by W. H. Stayton, chairman of the board of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and read today before the senate lobby committee credited President Herbert Hoover with beginning "to doubt whether prohibition can be enforced."

The letter was written to Charles S. Wood, a vice president of the anti-dry organization.

Report Merger of Sears Roebuck & Co., Montgomery Ward & Co.

Philadelphia, April 18.—(U.P.)—Lessing J. Rosenwald, vice president in charge of the local Sears Roebuck interests, today practically confirmed reports of a merger of Sears Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co., the two largest mail order houses in the country.

"The report, as far as I know, is substantially correct," Rosenwald said. "But it is entirely unofficial as the matter has not been brought before the board of directors."

LOS ANGELES MATRON FACES MURDER CHARGE

MRS. WALBRUGA OESTERRICH IS LODGED IN THE COUNTY JAIL

NEARBY, IN ANOTHER CELL, IS HER DEJECTED ATTIC LOVER

Los Angeles, April 18.—(U.P.) — Mrs. Walbruga Oesterrich was back in the county jail today, charged, for the second time in eight years, with murder.

Nearby, in another cell, sat a dejected little man who lived for eighteen years in an attic that he might be near Mrs. Oesterrich. He was Otto Sanhuber, jointly accused with the woman of the murder of her husband, Fred Oesterrich, Milwaukee manufacturer.

The widow's arraignment yesterday after an indictment a few hours earlier, was her second experience of that kind. Several months after Oesterrich was murdered in his home here, Mrs. Oesterrich was held for the slaying.

She gained freedom when authorities accepted her story that burglars had shot Oesterrich and then locked her in the closet where neighbors had found her.

Sanhuber pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity yesterday. He was indicted no a charge several days ago, after assertedly confessing that he shot the manufacturer in defending Mrs. Oesterrich.

INQUEST INTO DEATHS OF TWO VICTIMS OF OF CAR-BUS CRASH

Owatonna, Minn., April 18.—(U.P.)—An inquest into the deaths of William M. Gardner, St. Paul, and Henry Brock, Sr., Rochester, in an auto-bus collision near here Wednesday will be held by Coroner O. S. Degroat at 10 A. M. tomorrow.

Several passengers on the bus will be called to testify, he said, in announcing postponement of the hearing scheduled for today.

Radium Lasts Long

Radium loses its weight so gradually that it is estimated that it would take 1,760 years for a given quantity to lose half its weight.

TRUCK OWNERS AND MOTORISTS CAUTIONED

Truck owners are urged to postpone all heavy hauling and motorists generally are cautioned to avoid needless travel, in a statement issued today by Commissioner C. M. Babcock, in connection with the Highway department's weekly road condition report.

Rains and rapid thawing of the frost in the sub-grade have caused serious damage to many of the unpaved highways, and most of the state routes are reported as only fair to poor. They are generally passable to light traffic, and if travel can be reduced to a minimum, most of the routes can probably be kept open.

Load restrictions of 2½ to 3 tons are posted on many of the unpaved routes, but whether soch load limits are posted or not, persons who start out with too heavy loads run the risk of being mired, with heavy loss or expense in being pulled out. If they exceed the legal or posted load limits they also face the possibility of arrest and prosecution.

Detailed reports follow on trunk highways in the Brainerd Lake Region:

T. H. No. 2—Duluth, Brainerd, Wadena, Detroit Lakes and Moorhead—260 miles—Duluth, paved—Carlton, fair, (3 tons)—McGregor, good—Motley, good, fair—Staples, good—Wadena fair, (3 tons)—Perham, fair—Detroit Lakes, good—Hawley, paved—Moorhead.

T. H. No. 18—Elk River, Milaca and Brainerd—103 miles—Elk River, good—Princeton, good, (2½ tons)—Garrison, good—Brainerd.

T. H. No. 19—Brainerd, Walker and Cass Lake—93 miles—Brainerd, good—Pine River, detour, fair—Backus, good—Cass Lake.

ZION EVANGELICAL CHURCH DEDICATION

New House of Worship at McGrath Dedicated May 13

McGrath, Minn., April 18.—The Zion Evangelical Lutheran church, Rev. O. O. Rem, pastor, will on Sunday afternoon, May 13, dedicate their new house of worship.

The Rt. Rev. I. T. Aastad, president of the northern Minnesota district of the Norwegian Lutheran church, will officiate, assisted by the Rev. O. L. Bolstad, Brainerd; Rev. A. B. Bergh, Staples; Rev. J. K. Krogh, Little Falls; Rev. H. Hansen, Milaca; Rev. Roy Olson, St. Cloud; Rev. Oscar Rem, Pequot; and the local pastor, Rev. O. O. Rem.

Music for the dedication service will be furnished by the Holden Lutheran choir.

Rev. O. O. Rem, the present pastor, served this parish 25 years ago, at which time he organized the congregation and the ladies aid and started a subscription for money to build a new church. Soon after this time he moved to a new parish. The church was put up four years ago, but was not at that time finished. Last year Rev. O. O. Rem was called back to the parish he served a quarter of a century ago and was given the interesting and pleasurable experience of being the pastor in charge when the church he planned 25 years ago is dedicated.

Zion Lutheran congregation, which consists of 14 families, is very grateful to their active ladies aid society for good work done by this organization in helping to finance the building of the new church.

The church has a seating capacity of 150, is finished in hardwood, completely furnished, and there is a debt of only $300 on the church.

RECOVER 6 BODIES FROM CHARRED DEBRIS OF FIRE

MOST DISASTROUS FIRE IN HISTORY OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE NOW PLACES DEAD AT 20, SEARCH FOR BODIES CONTINUES

Iloilo, P. I., April 18.—(U.P.)—The constabulary on the Island of Occidental Negroes today recovered six bodies from the charred debris of the most disastrous fire in the history of the Philippine Islands.

A conservative estimate placed the dead at 20, it being known that others still were buried beneath the wreckage. The search for bodies continued today unabated amid scenes of horrible desolation.

The fire laid waste many homes in the villages of Sagay and Fabrica and for a time threatened Cadiz. The conflagration started in a lumber mill at Sagay.

H. C. Pope, assistant general superintendent of the Fabrica mills, said that more than 5,000,000 feet of mahogany, the entire mill equipment, 300 company houses and more than 100 private homes were razed by the fire.

In addition the postoffice, grocery stores and warehouses were burned. Thieves rifled the post office safe, Pope said, obtaining about $1,000 and some important documents.

Health officers are attempting to prevent epidemics while the constabulary is guarding against further looting.

Total loss, it is estimated, will exceed $5,000,000.

"SHEIK'S WIFE" BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

EVELYN READE, young and lovely, is making her first journey alone to visit a friend at Haverford. On the train she meets Kenneth Wilmer, famous artist, who saves her from falling from the platform. Attracted by her old-fashioned sweetness, he feels strangely drawn to her and suddenly kisses her. He persuades her to stop in and see the Hollys, friends of his, intead of going on to her destination. She falls asleep on a couch in the living room. Waking in the morning she is panic striken and stealthily leaves the house. She finally arrives at her friend's home. Mary Stewart thinks Eve came in on the early morning train. Sunday evening Kenneth Wilmer comes to call.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER V.

THEY were very gay over the waffles and the maple syrup Mary brought from the cellar at the last moment. Kenneth, Eve saw, had the gift of easy popularity; of making quick, warm friendships, adapting himself to the viewpoint and manner and life of whomever he found himself with. It was a long while before she learned that this was merely a surface affability, that the tall boy was too dyed-in-the-wool Bohemian to be entirely happy with any but his own kind.

Jimmy, who was in a Wall Street office, politely mentioned art, but Kenneth turned the conversation to aviation instead. They all were interested in this and he told of a member of The Lane colony, Norwood O'Rell, author of at least two successful novels, who kept an old "crate" on his place and often went loitering about high over hills and river when he had finished his work for the day.

O'Rell had been with the aviation corps in France and Eve had read his exciting tales of battles fought in the sky. And when Ken promised to bring him to call some evening she felt the interest natural to the average person at contact with any who have achieved recognition through creative art.

But more than the prospect of meeting "Nory" it was Ken's modesty, his tactful refusal to talk of himself and his work which thrilled her. Despite his youth this boy was one of the most popular creators of girl portraits; month after month his girl faces decorated every news stand in America on magazine covers, and his illustrations appeared all through magazine pages.

Yet try as Mary might—and did—not a word could she get him to say of himself save that he had begun young; that his family had been hard up and couldn't send him to college so he went right from high school to do commercial illustrating at an advertising house. He attended art school at night and sort of "branched" out," as he put it, afterward.

And this was another thing Eve was to learn through Ken, that artists, writers, composers—those actually and successfully engaged in creative work—have little to say about their activities excepting perhaps to other artists, writers and composers; and that they go through none of the traditional gestures of frenzied genius, saving their energy for their work instead. It is those in whom the will to write or draw or compose passes for ability who babble and tear their hair and arouse public disgust for what is known as "temperament."

There is plenty of temperament among workers in every branch of creative art, but it does not express itself in blatant idiocy.

Eleven o'clock struck before Jimmy gave a surprised glance around and said he must think of turning in. "Monday's a hard day in my shop," he apologized. "You folks go on with the party though—Mary's a lazybones who can snooze all day," he grinned. "I don't suppose you're ever driven?" he asked Ken rather wistfully.

"Am I not! Fellows like you don't know your luck. I've got two wild-eyed editors on my trail right now. . . And it's time for me to start back. This worthless redhead," he chuckled and put his hand on Eve's arm—touched her lightly, but with a suggestion of caress that brought the blood surging into her face—"forgot to leave your address. I must have asked at every house between here and The Lane where Stewart lived. If your name isn't known all over Rockfield County it won't be my fault."

He shook hands with Jimmy and met for a long estatic moment. She trembled with the sweetness of it, feeling herself caught with him in a flame of passion which seemed to burn out separate individuality, fuse them into one being.

They were silent when they dropped apart and each could see that the other was rather white, startled and shaken.

He put his hands on her arms, looking at her in a tense, grave way. "I love you, Eve," he said huskily.

"Ken—oh, Ken!"

When she came in, star-eyed, Mary was waiting. Little, dependable, unimaginative Mary with her yearning for romance—her yearning which would take her a short way on the path to adventure and then send her scurrying back to safe, solid things. Mary with her small, square figure casting an anxious housewife's eye over the living room even as she turned anxiously to her friend.

"Darling, I don't blame you for being carried away. He is charming. But—"

"I love you, Eve," He Said, Huskily.

Mary, inviting them to visit his cottage, and dropped an arm about Eve, taking it for granted she would walk to the gate with him. She said, "In a second, Mary—don't wait—" And meant to hurry back, to conform to the circumspect standards which were Mary's and Jimmy's and which always had been hers.

But the night was full of enchantment and out in the shadows of lilacs and syringas just bursting into leaf Ken's arms were around her again, his kisses on her hair and eyes and lips.

"Sweetheart—gorgeous girl . . . what if I hadn't found you? You wont go away from me again? Say you wont leave me again, Eve . . ."

She was stirred by the emotion in his voice, moved to a deep solemnity. Did he care so much? Oh—a hundredth part as much as she cared — could he do this? "Ken," she murmured. "Why, Ken, darling—"

"Kiss me, Eve No—your arms around me— you know you hadn't kiss— ? I've always been the o—

She slip— —s around his neck, lace— —rs together, drew his h— their lips

Eve went over quickly, kissed her, laughing all the while. "You're going to say, 'but he isn't Jimmy.' And that is all right; there isn't two of anybody. Well, then?"

"Oh, Eve, do listen. I'm older than you—"

"Two years—"

"—and married—"

"Six months. Why all the sophistication, dear?"

"Marriage does change you, Eve. And I know something about people like him; I've got two actor cousins you remember. It isn't that I'm finding fault—I wouldn't hurt you for the world. They're wonderful, some of them, in their way, but it isn't our way. They're different from folks like you and me. Alien species—I doubt if we ever actually get to know them. They think differently—of course they must or there'd be no art or music or novels—and so they have to act differently, too. The thing is that the two kinds just can't mix—our kind and theirs."

Eve smiled, dreaming over those moments at the gate. "But this difference, Mary — maybe it's a nice difference?"

Gandhi, Unsuccessful, But—

ONE month has now passed since Mahatma Gandhi started out from Ahmedabad, in the Presidency of Bombay, upon his campaign to upset British rule in India, says the Christian Science Monitor. The British authorities, recognizing the widespread respect of the Indian masses for Gandhi as an ascetic and preacher, have consistently maintained the unusual course of declining to arrest him, though he has gone about ostentatiously breaking and inciting others to violate the law relating to the Government's salt monopoly.

Their effort to ignore the logical revolutionary implications of the doctrine of passive resistance and opposition to taxation he has been preaching has not prevented their arresting a number of his followers and obtaining convictions in the ordinary courts. Gandhi's chief lieutenant, Vallabhai Patel, brother of the President of the Legislative Assembly at Delhi, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment. One of his sons, Ram Das Gandhi, has been committed to jail for six months at hard labor. Another son, Davi Das Gandhi, has been arrested. Naravan Prasad Singh, a former member of the Legislative Assembly, is serving one year's imprisonment for violating the salt laws in Behar. In several big centers of India, including Bombay, Calcutta and Bangalore, rioting has been put down by firing upon the crowds.

The Government of India has thus acted up to the declaration made by Lord Irwin, the British Viceroy, when he said: "I shall discharge to the full responsibility resting upon myself and upon my Government for effective maintenance of laws and authority and for the preservation of peace and order."

Gandhi's campaign, while stirring up much excitement among the Hindus, has evoked no general movement among the more responsible Indian leaders of political thought. A good winter harvest throughout northern India has also been an unfavorable background for unrest. There has not been the slightest response among the Muhammadans, who constitute one-fifth of the total population. The Sikhs, whose importance as a militant caste altogether outweighs their comparative insignificance in numbers, have remained aloof.

Gandhi's chief supporters are Hindu students, always an element to be reckoned wth seriously where political agitation in India is concerned. These young men, organized as the Indian National Congress Volunteers, have been leaders in minor breaches of the salt laws in many parts of India. Within the last few days there have been arrests and other police incidents directly arising from the illegal collection or manufacture of salt not only in districts in the Bombay Presidency within reach of the area where Gandhi has been preaching, but in Delhi and other such far distant parts of India as Cawnpore in the United Provinces, Lahore in the Punjab, Patna in Behar and Chingleput in Madras.

While it can be said that so far Gandhi has failed in his purpose of starting a nonviolent revolution, it would be altogether unwise to predict that the movement for which he stands is either extinct or in process of disintegration. Gandhi is still a great force in India. The impracticable nature of his propaganda in no way reduces the influence he wields in certain directions. There seems at present no alternative to British rule other than chaos. Nevertheless, so long as men of Gandhi's stamp oppose this rule its continuance can be regarded as in no way completely assured.

Time Means Nothing to This Worker

TIME, the all essential factor in the daily lives of railroad men, evidently means nothing to John M. Horan, who has completed 75 years of continuous service with the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railway.

Although 92 years old, Mr. Horan, who works each day as a boiler washer inspector in the shops at Milwaukee, announced that he is not yet ready to accept his pension. The other day President H. A. Scandrett and other officials called on him in a special train and had a dinner with Horan as the honor guest.

Horan started work for the railroad in 1855 piling and loading wood onto the wood burning locomotives of that age. As motive power changed, he switched his occupation, working successively as a machinist, engineer, traveling inspector and now, after years of service that exceeds the average life span, the life of a railroad man continues to fascinate him.

Facing Attacks

THE Literary Digest states that it is being attacked more for the undertaking of the prohibition poll than any previous one. Five pages of the current issue of the magazine are devoted to comments on the "straw" referendum from women throughout the country.

The magazine announces that both the wets and the drys seem to be claiming the vote for modification, which approaches one-third of the total returns, and that for purpose of compromise it suggests dividing this vote between the two extreme wings of the controversy, which, split between them, would at present make a total vote for enforcement of 1,391,419 and 1,784,554 for repeal.

THE ladies are not the only ones to burst out with a rare effulgence and bloom of pretty things this Eastertide. There are suits and topcoats, new cravats, sweaters, shirts, handkerchiefs, etc., for the men.

THE Brainerd area has been very fortunate this year in having no forest or brush fires doing any great damage. Due to vigilance of the rangers fire destruction has been reduced to a minimum.

IN Florida they have earnest tax collections. A railroad company had neglected to pay its taxes and the authorities seized a passenger train, several locomotives, 60 miles of track, etc.

SPEAKING of chain letters, a Dispatch subscriber says he has broken many of them, in fact, has felt a positive pleasure in breaking a chain and has experienced no evil effects.

STILLWATER is to make a strong bid for the location of a federal prison farm in its vicinity if the government decides to establish one in Minnesota.

CARRYING coals to Newcastle has its counterpart in the Massachusetts man trying to sell Norway spruce trees in northern Minnesota.

SEVERAL hundred young people will gather at St. Olaf college June 9 to 15 for the annual Luther League National Institute.
